Farmer Bob walked out to his field and looked over the fresh crop. For some reason, everything seemed a bit sharper and better looking lately. Which made Bob happy. But many of his favorite tools had vanished from the market, which made Bob unhappy. Surely they would return to the market later, but he'd probably have to pay for the access. "The Man" was always stickin it to Bob like that. Because that's "The Man"'s job.

Bob looked over his combine. It was dirty, but there was no damage to it, but that was expected. There was never any damage. He'd taken to jumping his tractor off cliffs and humming Dixie. Maybe he'd get a horn set up for it.

Bob's life was never exciting. There were no aliens, commie invasions to fight off, or Godzilla vs Mothra battles in the north 40. But that's okay. Bob drove tractors. He liked driving tractors and combines and loaders in giant circles and squares and quadrilaterals and stuff. And that's what's important in life. That, and sneaking off with the chickens' eggs to make some extra cash. It helped that he'd clubbed that dang rooster over the head every time he heard it. It finally seemed to shut up, or at least turn the volume down.

The south field was already planted, so Bob hopped into yet another tractor and hooked up a sprayer. Setting the brand spankin new cruise control to its only value - cruise, he activated the spray and drove his first pass over the field. Coming to the end of the field, he shut off the sprayer. The cruise control immediately sensed the shutoff and floored the accelerator. Bob whipped the tractor around as fast as he could and the cruise slowed a bit through the turn. But when he straightened out, the cruise shifted into warp 7. The inertial dampeners failed and Bob was crushed against the back seat of his machine, accelerating out of control. As his ribs cracked and he lost consciousness, his last thoughts were of how poorly the English language could express his dislike of the new cruise control. At least the tractor wouldn't be damaged.

. Decent nothing great should've given her something from Capcom's games like Dino Crisis.. I remember looking at Mutant Storm when it first came out and being absolutely blown away by how it looked, how things moved in it. It was a genuine and very real inspiration for me thinking "one day, I want to do something like that" and well, I do now.

It wasn't just the game, it was that there was this really small team making arcade games at a point where it's generally accepted that the arcade is dead. Well, that's fairly good right?

And sure, looks wise even despite a couple of makeovers it looks sort of less inspirational now than it did in the early 2000's and we're in a post Geometry Wars world where everything subscribes to a similar sort of neon-particle explosion sort of thing and I like that, I really really like that but Mutant Storm looks like Mutant Storm and nothing else. It's clearly got Minter-spirations but it's very very "looks like a Pompom game" and that's the kind of thing we can all aspire to. Not necessarily looking like Pompom but making a game that's ours and unmistakably ours too.

The gameplay seems, now, rather tame considering. It's not easy but there's a rigidity to the waves and patterns that compared to a lot of what we see now is very much more considered. And that's fine, absolutely fine because it still remains a very good little game of shooting things. And what's a game like this if not about shooting things, right? Right.

So yeah, Mutant Storm. A classic and an inspiration to me. Still, after all these years. An essential, no doubt.. I would love to play this game but it keeps telling me that it is either not responding or just freezes..

. The fact games like this have positive ratings at the time of writing this review, is an indication of the low standards set for games on Steam these days and the troll reviews that come with it.

This game is nothing more than an idle process as you wait for achievements to pop. It's made even worse by the fact the developer has 2 premium DLC's which speed up this process but add nothing more to this poor excuse for a "game".

Not to mention the fact that this game is simply a re-upload of an old game by the same name, possibly made by the same person under a different name.

It takes around 40-50 hours to fully idle the game in around 5-6 increments of idling for 8 hours at a time (the time in which it takes to dry the paint on the wall).. If you need to pause in HOI4, don't buy this game. Played a lot of this game's early stages on Game Jolt, and some of it in its current state on Steam. Although it's currently lacking some polish, it's definitely going to be a promising 3D platformer.

great concepts. A liittle buggy but not bad. I work in the Oil and Gas Industry and this is the 1st game I've tried with petroleum references that hasn't insulted it though having well sites at the plant site is pretty rare in my region. Will be interested to see the game developpe if that is the plan.. For the price, this is pretty cool!

The UI leaves something to be desired in spots. Like for some reason you have to hit enter on the keyboard to confirm engineering when everything else can be done with the mouse. And there's some typos here and there. And the tutorial doesn't really explain everything, like that you have to unlock the other colony pods, I only stumbled across that in the quests screen. It feels a little early-access-ish, but it just came out and maybe there will be some polishing patches.

BUT, for 5 bucks (three on sale right now), it's a really chill little "wander around the universe" game where you scan planets and maybe terraform them a little, and put down colonies to make more money to buy more stuff. And then occasionally you can like, use something called THE WORLDTAKER to basically a kill a sentinet planet and use its neuro network to build a really good colony and that kind of makes me feel like a monster, and that's fun. And I guess I could bomb the colonies that the other alien races set up if I ever find the stuff to do that?

If this was priced higher, it would be hard to recommend, to be honest, but there's a lot there for cheap and so far it's been a really relaxing little game to chill out with while I watch tv or listen to a podcast. So, thumbs up.
